There's no wiki to move documentation to yet (it seems you're the only one with the power to create one).

- Status changed from New to In Progress

- Assignee set to jahoti

Unless anybody else wants to take this task on, I'm happy to do so (having managed to create the wiki).

However, there is a critical decision to make first: do we want to use Textile or Markdown for the wiki? It is currently set to use Textile (Administration → Settings → Text Formatting); Markdown would seem a much better choice, both for its widespread familiarity and not insisting every paragraph start with "p. ". That said, it's not my decision to make singlehandedly, nor a setting I have the ability to change.

Changed to Markdown as per your request

#4 - 07/05/2021 04:50 AM - jahoti

- % Done changed from 0 to 90

(Thank you for switching it to Markdown!)

The documentation is now all on the wiki, with a slight re-organization purely to avoid h4 (it won't be too difficult to change this if closer adherence to doc.org is preferred). The only issue is a few references to the build system, which treat it as hypothetical; one is the article on the topic, the other the last paragraph in the article on code modularity. There are almost certainly also mistakes in changing from org-mode to markdown, albeit for obvious reasons none I can point to.

#5 - 07/09/2021 05:05 AM - jahoti

- Status changed from In Progress to Feedback

#6 - 07/09/2021 05:16 PM - koszko

- Status changed from Feedback to Closed

I think there might also be some other things that need updating, especially now, as I made some things show up in the popup. In the future I might have to force myself to always update documentation together with my branch. Anyway, this is beyond the scope of this issue (which I consider complete, btw).

Thank you very much for this work :) close adherence to doc.org is not necessary
